ALFRED CONNET.

PREFACE.

This little volume is intended as a memorial of my father and mother. To me their life and faith and prayers and councils have been a constant inspiration, and I humbly hope that, through divine grace, I may be permitted, when done with time, to meet them in the better land.

I am painfully conscious of the incompleteness of this work. No doubt many interesting facts have been lost, while only the briefest mention could be made of those facts that have come down to us.

I wish here to acknowledge my indebtedness to F. O. Conant's book, "History and Genealogy of the Conant Family," also to letters received from him, to the Family Record in my grandfather Connet's Family Bible, to a copy of the Family Record in my grandfather French's Bible, received many years ago, to my brother Oliver Connet for valuable aid, and to all who have furnished data, or in any way aided me in the work.

THE AUTHOR.

Murray, Okla., Feb. 1, 1906.

F. O. Conant, in his able and exhaustive work, History and Genealogy of the Conant family, says in the Introduction "The Conant family appears to be primarily of Celtic descent. Nobody knows when the Celts first settled in Britain, for at the beginning of authentic history the island was inhabited by them. Records remain to show that the name Conant in very nearly its present form, has existed in England for over 600 years. The orthography has varied considerably, due principally to the ignorance of clerks. In England 32 ways of writing the name have been found, and in America 18 ways, 9 of which are included in the foregoing, making 41 variations in all. In Devonshire, England, the old home of the family, tho the name is written Conant, the common pronunciation is Connet or Cunnet."—History and Genealogy of the Conant Family, by F. O. Conant.

In the above Mr. Conant includes the various ways of writing the name Connet.

In America the name Connet, tho variously written, is now a distinct name from Conant, and will be so regarded in this work. It appears from Mr. Conant's work that it had become a distinct name in England, tho in some instances the same person's name seems to have been written Conant and sometimes Connet, with still other variations. He finds a large number of Connets in England, most of them in the County of Devon, one of the S. W. counties. He says in a letter to the writer, "Undoubtedly the Connets came from Devonshire, England." This is the opinion of Harry Connett, a Major in the Salvation Army, Cleveland, Ohio, but formerly from Devonshire, England.

I make special note of the following variations in writing the name: Conet, Connet, Conett, Connett, Cunnet, Cunnett. For other variations see Mr. Conant's book.

The writer has not been able to learn at what date the first or any subsequent migration of Connets reached America. The eastern branch of Narragansett Bay is called Seakonet or Seaconnet, but when or by whom so named, the author does not know. It is certain there were Connets in America at an early date. Mr. Conant finds that there was an Indian named William Connett at Yantic, Conn., in 1682. He has recently learned that there were Connets at Charlestown, Mass., at a very early date. I here quote in full a letter received from Mr. Conant, that will, I am sure, interest all Connets.

PORTLAND, ME., February 16, 05.

Dear Sir:

I have just made a very interesting discovery, viz: that Henry Connet, on page 563 of my book, was born in Charlestown, Mass., son of John Connet, who was a son of James Connet and Mehetable, dr. of Richard Gardner. The name Gardner is suggestive, for in my book a Gardner Connet, living in New Jersey, 1728, is mentioned; doubtless he was a son or grandson. Henry had brothers, James, b. 1690, John, b. 1692, Matthew, b. 1700, and a sister Sarah, b. 1695. The names James and Matthew are also names found among the New Jersey Connets, and I think the whole family moved to New Jersey.

The James born in 1690 was most likely your great, great grandfather. I do not feel sure that John was the father of these brothers. It may be the first James was. Hill Wyman's Genealogies and Estates of Charlestown say, "John, son of James, was father of James, John, Henry, Matthew." This first James was apparently ancestor of a large part, if not all the New Jersey Connets.

Yours truly,

F. O. CONANT.

If Mr. Conant is correct in his opinion that the James Connet named above, born in 1690, is the author's great, great-grandfather, then we are able to trace our ancestry back 215 years. And if he is correct, most, if not all the Connets in America are related, unless there have been subsequent migrations of the family to this country. While Mr. Conant is probably correct, we lack positive evidence. I, therefore, begin the genealogy of my branch of the family with my great grandfather, about whom I know but little, except his name and the names of his children.

1. James Connet, the writers great grandfather, was born about ~~1730~~ <sup>1720</sup>, place not known. Late in life he lived in Essex Co., N. J. He married twice, name of first wife not known. Name of second wife, Amy Kelly, w. of ——— Harris.

Children by first wife:

- i. Moses.
- ii. William.
- iii. John, who was murdered by a Mr. McDaniel, William or James, both names have been given to the writer. McDaniel was executed.
- iv. Sarah. She married a man by the name of Meshet, first name not known.

Children by second wife:

- v. Mary. She married Van Northwick, first name not known.
- vi. James, the writer's grandfather, b. April 14, 1764, probably in Essex Co. N. J. m.

vii. Spencer, married Phebe ——. They had several children. He lived in sight of grandfather's, and died young.

It is believed that William and Moses were both married, that they had children and that they lived near grandfather's, but that John was not married. There were Van Northwicks at Bound Brook, N. J. in 1890, but no Connets were living in that vicinity at that date. Old people living there said there had been Connets there, but could give no definite information in regard to them. Neither were there any Meshets or Van Orticks there at that time, but there were Van Northwicks there.

2. (vi.) James, (James), the writer's grandfather, b. April 14, 1764, d. June 25, 1845. near Prosperity, Pa. He married in Essex Co., N. J., Oct. 21, 1793, Jane, dr. of Joseph and Elizabeth (—) Powel. b. Dec. 17, 1776, in Essex Co., N. J., d. Sept. 2, 1846, near Prosperity, Pa. Joseph Powel was of Dutch decent, a cooper, and a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He removed to Albany, N. Y. and died there. James Connet was a weaver. He and his wife appear to have removed one or more times during their stay in N. J., for the testimony is that they lived in Essex Co., that they lived in Morris township, not far from Elizabeth, not far from Mendham, twenty miles from the ocean, and in hearing of the church bells at Bound Brook. They were members of the Presbyterian church. Grandfather's parents were both dead when he and grandmother were married. They moved to Washington Co., Pa., in 1801 and lived and died on a little farm of about 40 acres about three miles N. E. of where the village of Prosperity now stands. Grandmother said that grandfather's folks were of English decent.

Late in life they united with the Bethel, Cumberland Presbyterian, church at Vanburen, Washington Co., Pa.
